NEW! SLICE Thermocouple Adaptor

Looking for an easy way to measure temperature with SLICE data recorders?

"Test engineers want to understand how different parameters interact and affect one another over time and temperature variations," says Hans Hellsund, Director of Sales and Marketing for DTS. "SLICE's new thermocouple connection capabilities make that possible."

A new, easy way to collect thermocouple data with SLICE NANO, SLICE MICRO & SLICE PRO

Now SLICE users can easily collect thermocouple data, along with acceleration, force, pressure and angular rate data. The new THA Thermocouple Adaptor features a standard miniature thermocouple connector and sensor ID, and makes it extremely simple to connect Type K thermocouples to SLICE NANO, SLICE MICRO and SLICE PRO data acquisition systems. Signals from all parameters being measured are stored in a simple, easy to access SLICE data file.

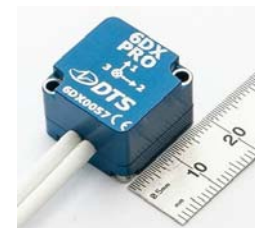

The 32.5 x 19 x 10 mm miniature form factor of the THA Thermocouple Adaptor makes it extremely compatible with all DTS SLICE systems. "With the THA Adaptor interface, DTS can now provide an ideal, ruggedized solution for customers seeking a quick and economical method of logging temperature data with SLICE," adds Hellsund. NEW! 6DX PRO RANGE OPTIONS

Expanded ranges mean new applications for the world's smallest, high performance six degrees of freedom sensor package.

6DX PRO	ACCELEROMETER RANGES	ANGULAR RATE RANGES
2K-300 New!	±2000 g, triax	±300 deg/sec, triax
2K-1500 New!	±2000 g, triax	±1500 deg/sec, triax
2K-8K New!	±2000 g, triax	±8000 deg/sec, triax
2K-18K	±2000 g, triax	±18000 deg/sec, triax
20K-50K	±20000 g, triax	±50000 deg/sec, triax
